

ABOUT YOURCFO

YourCFO is a network of CPA's, bookkeepers and human resources professionals dedicated to your business and personal success.

We work with startup and established small business clients to help them acquire financing and setup or improve all facets of their financial operations. We also help more mature organizations expand by acquisition, or prepare for retirement and succession. In short, we provide small businesses and their owners the resources of a Chief Financial Officer, without the six-figure salary.

Our value proposition is simple. By relieving you of non-core business functions, you will have more time to devote to those efforts that grow your business. YourCFO maintains relationships with several investment managers, local banks and IT consultants—even other CPA firms—to help better serve our clients' needs.

Websites for the Small Business Owner

CCH Business Owner Toolkit

<http://www.toolkit.cch.com>

Answers to business, tax and legal questions as well as practical tips for starting, running and growing small businesses.

U.S. Small Business Administration

<http://www.sba.gov>

A wealth of information for start ups as well as established businesses. Includes information on qualifying for and bidding on government contracts. Good information on small business loan programs, etc.

Experian Credit Bureau

<http://www.experian.com>

Our experience has shown the consumer credit reports from Experian are usually the most detailed of the three major reporting agencies (TransUnion and Equifax being the other two). Recent legislation will soon require these agencies to provide you one credit report per year upon request, at no charge. If you plan to start looking for a loan, see what's in your credit report before your prospective lender does.

The Motley Fool

<http://www.fool.com>

Website devoted to individual investors regardless of sophistication. Numerous articles on wealth management and accumulation as well as discussions on a variety of topics.

MSN Money Central

<http://moneycentral.msn.com/>

Lots of personal finance articles, links to brokerage firms and plenty of advice around tax time.

United States Postal Service

<http://www.usps.com/directmail>

Aside from looking up zip codes and ordering stamps online, the site contains a wealth of information about designing mail pieces for a direct marketing campaign, as well as tools and tips for increasing response rates.

Bankrate.com

<http://www.bankrate.com>

Find interest rate information, calculate loan payments, etc.

Microsoft Office Templates

<http://office.microsoft.com/en-us/templates>

A treasure trove of templates for Office applications including form letters, invoices, marketing materials and more!

The Mozilla Organization

<http://www.mozilla.org>

From the ashes of Netscape arose the Mozilla Organization. This open source organization created the new Firefox web browser and Thunderbird e-mail client. This web browser is more advanced than Internet Explorer and, because it's not installed on 95% of the computers in the free world, it's not as prone to attack by hackers.
